Elegant and sophisticated, the Cornice sideboard borrows its name from the eponymous wardrobe in the Pianca collection. The element that gives the unit its character is the frame that runs round the edges of all the panels, punctuating the structure and drawing attention to the run of modules. Just as stylish, but slightly more eccentric, is the hinged lid style opening of the doors on each end, a feature also found on Pianca's new collection of wardrobes. The 'open' Cornice can take centre stage in the room rather than be confined just to its closed form. An attractive option is covering the doors and top in synthetic leather.
